Shizuoka and Scale Models

“Hobby Capital of the World”

Shizuoka and Scale Models

- Shizuoka, with its abundant forest resources has always had a thriving wood and bamboo industry dating back more than 200 years ago.
- Jiro Aoshima, the first man to build and fly a civil airplane in Shizuoka, established the Aoshima Flight Research Institute in 1924. To promote aviation, the manufacture and sale of wooden model airplanes started in 1932.

Shizuoka and Scale Models

- Following WWII, out of work wood craftsmen plied their trade on wooden models.
- By the fifties, American plastic models were being imported into Japan and the local industry, recognizing the opportunities, switched to plastic.
- Tamiya closed their sawmill in 1953, focused entirely on models, and released their first plastic kit in 1960 – a 1/800 scale IJN Yamato. Two years later, they released a motorized Panther establishing the standard scale of 1/35 for armour.

Shizuoka and Scale Models

- Tamiya and Hasegawa thrived during the 60's along with the rest of Japan's recovering economy. Soon they were joined by Aoshima and Fujimi.
- Tamiya opened their new head office in 1973

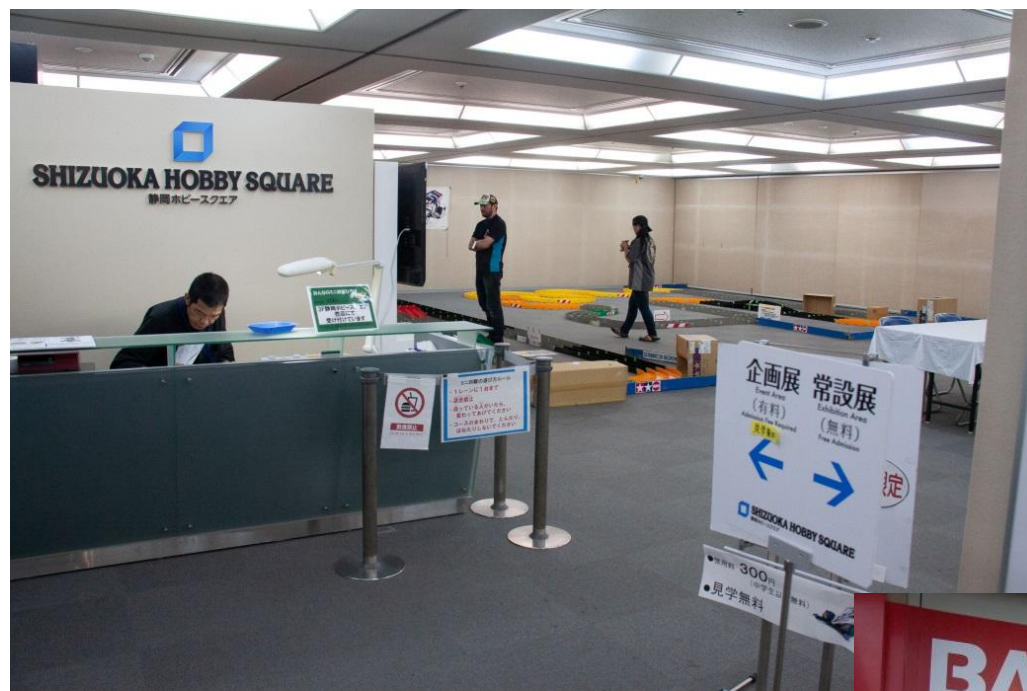

Shizuoka and Scale Models

- Exports to the rest of the world started in earnest in the 1970s.
- Bandai's hobby division, originally based in Tokyo, moved to Shizuoka in 1969 and later established the Bandai Hobby Center in 2006.

The illustration is signed 'Gally Salame' in the bottom right corner.

- Held every May at the Twin Messe Shizuoka convention centre in Shizuoka City.
- This free event is attended by approximately 70,000 people – multigenerational, across all walks of life
- Organized by the Shizuoka Model and Educational Material Cooperative Association, consisting of Tamiya, Hasegawa, and Aoshima. These companies are all based in Shizuoka along with Bandai, Fujimi, Fine Molds and Kotobukiya.

Show Facts

- The show is dedicated to scale models, unlike other toy fairs around the world, and provides a venue for approximately 80 model manufacturers to showcase their new products.
- More than 290 modeling clubs in Japan and from overseas showcase about 10,000 works in a group exhibition during the event called the “Modelers’ Club Joint Work Exhibition”. This exhibition takes up about one third of the floor space.

Why should I go to the Tamiya tour during the show?

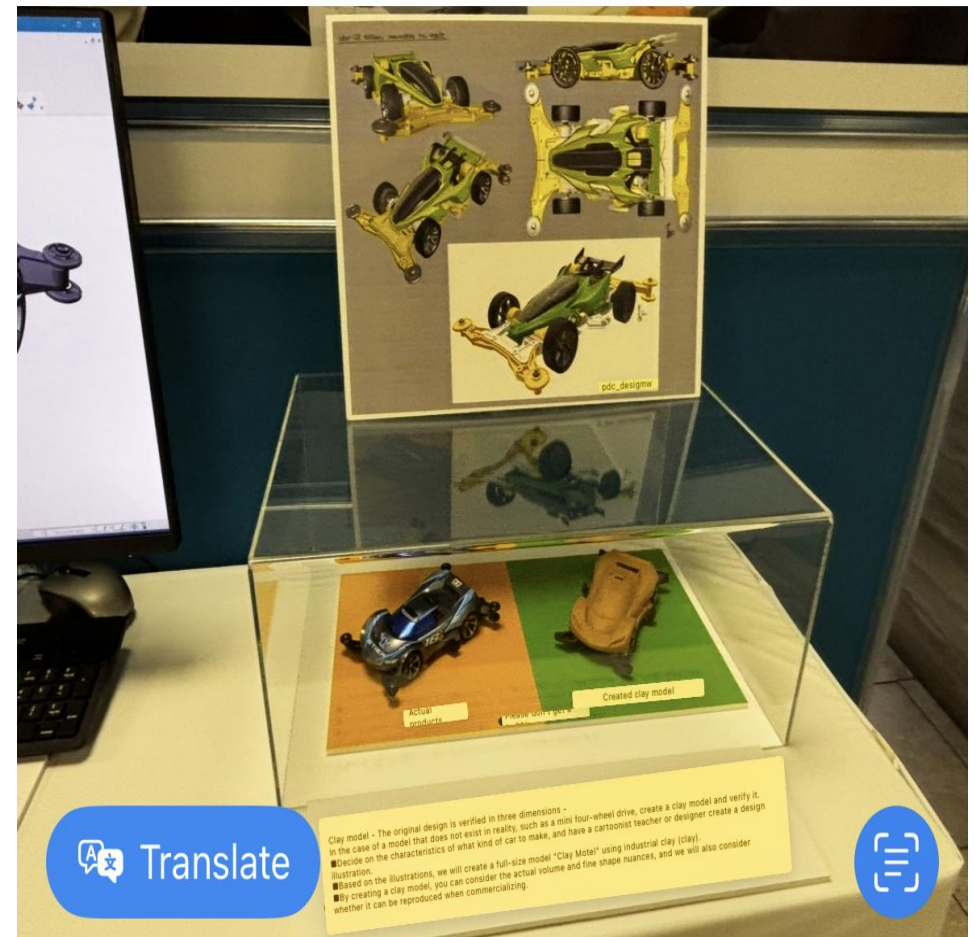

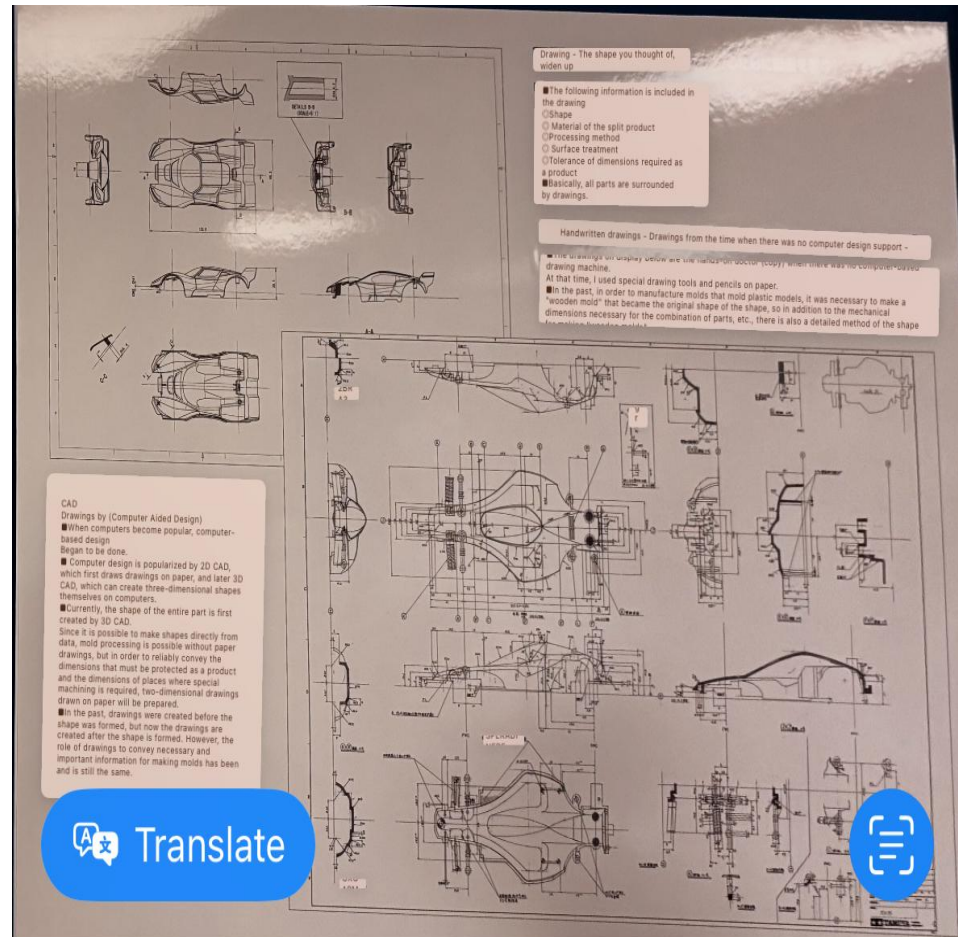

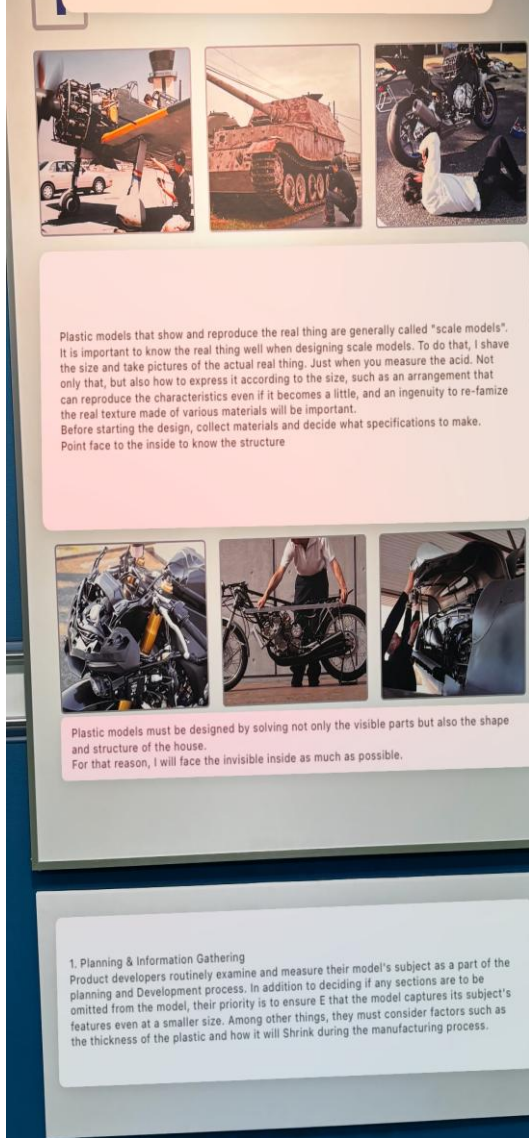

- It's nice for Tamiya to have a tour at the same time as the show.
- Can't I just book a tour anytime in a year with Tamiya?
